COOLEY DICKINSON HOSPITAL REPORT ON GIVING

FISCAL YEAR 2021

January 2022

To Our Generous Donors,

It is our sincere pleasure to thank you for your generosity to this organization that we all depend on.

As Cooley Dickinson continues to assess and respond to the ongoing repercussions of the COVID-19 pandemic, one thing is clear. Now, more than ever, philanthropic support is critically important to our ability to deliver the high-quality healthcare you, your loved ones, your neighbors, and our community deserve.

In addition to supporting quality, your gifts support greater access to outstanding care. Caleb Cooley Dickinson would be pleased to know that the hospital that bears his name continues to serve everyone in our community, including those with little means.

In this report on giving, you will find stories that reveal some of the many reasons donors have been compelled to give. You'll read about a 13-year-old boy who donated his bar mitzvah money to our hospital and a father who credits Cooley Dickinson with saving his son's life. You'll learn about various programs and initiatives, including the Childbirth Center and the Emergency Department, that can be improved, because of you.

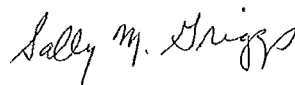

We are grateful to be part of a community of individuals and businesses who understand the importance of working together for our greater good. Thank you.

Sincerely,

► Lynnette M. Watkins, MD, MBA

STRONGER TOGETHER: COVID-19 IN 2021

Sam Costin-Shaw: Bar Mitzvah Gifts Support COVID Care

Though he is only 13-years old, 8th grader Sam Costin-Shaw speaks with a sonorous baritone voice and a maturity that belies his years. A resident of Florence, Sam is the son of Amanda Costin and Rebecca Shaw and attends Hilltown Cooperative Charter Public School in Easthampton.

Last year, when he was preparing to celebrate his bar mitzvah, Sam was feeling the impact of the COVID pandemic. Says Sam, "My mom and I watch Rachel Maddow, and as the COVID numbers began to rise, we were seeing the incredible stress on healthcare workers. I felt terrible watching the news. I couldn't begin to imagine how doctors and nurses and EMTs were feeling."

Sam decided he wanted his bar mitzvah gifts to support COVID-related needs at Cooley Dickinson. To this end, he composed a letter asking family and friends to support the hospital.

"My mom sent my letter to a lot of people," says Sam, "and the response was amazing." The gifts that Sam's letter raised supported Cooley's COVID vaccine clinic.

The generally accepted meaning of the Hebrew word "mitzvah" refers to a good deed. Cooley Dickinson is grateful to Sam Costin-Shaw for his "mitzvah," and for turning his concern about COVID and healthcare workers into an action that helped protect hundreds in our community.

PROTECTING OUR COMMUNITY

Beyond the Hospital Walls: COVID-19 Care Kits and Outreach

- ▼ Emma Aldana with Marta Guevara, director of the Office of Student & Family Engagement for the Amherst Regional Public Schools.

Emma Aldana, Interpreter Services Manager, knew as soon as the vaccine rollout began that Cooley Dickinson needed to be out in the community answering questions.

"It was particularly difficult for people whose first language is something other than English to get the COVID information they needed," explains Aldana.

"We wanted to go to where these community members are and make information more accessible."

Partnering with local school districts, affordable housing developments, and health departments, Aldana organized events where Cooley Dickinson bilingual healthcare providers, medical interpreters, and A Positive Place staff connected directly with community members. The group also distributed over 1,000 care kits that included masks, hand sanitizer, soap, and COVID informational flyers in English, Spanish, Khmer, and Chinese. Cooley Dickinson's Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Council collaborated with Mass General Brigham to produce the kits, with Aldana and her team creating the translated flyers and information specific to our community.

"People were happy to see us," says Aldana. "And it was important for Cooley Dickinson to help decrease fears and demonstrate that the hospital is a place everyone can trust."

Community Vaccine Clinic

Cooley Dickinson opened the COVID-19 Community Vaccination Clinic to patients for their first doses on February 3, 2021. Leading up to that historic day, teams of clinicians, care providers, information technology staff, administrators, pharmacy staff, support services staff, and many more worked tirelessly to help patients receive the eagerly anticipated vaccine. One team member was Security Officer Rick Durocher, who directed traffic or greeted patients at every clinic from the opening day through June.

"The patient vaccine clinics really stand out in all my years at Cooley," remembers Durocher, who has protected Cooley Dickinson patients for the past 15 years. "Patients were so grateful. The staff were so dedicated; they were there for the cause.

We helped patients who hadn't left their homes in months due to COVID. They were scared. And then they came to the clinic and got the vaccine."

The Community Vaccine Clinic administered over 17,000 vaccine doses February through June 2021. From security officers to primary care physicians, each dose depended on a team of healthcare heroes to get to Cooley Dickinson's patients. We wish to thank the many donors who made this possible.

REBIRTH OF THE CHILDBIRTH CENTER

Project Update

Cooley Dickinson Hospital is thrilled to announce that on November 8, 2021 construction began on the Childbirth Center. This important project to renovate and upgrade the department is only made possible because of generous donors. Because of you, families in our community can have the “homebirth in a hospital” experience that they seek close to home, at your community hospital. We cannot thank you enough! Your commitment to exceptional, compassionate healthcare will benefit generations of Cooley Babies and their parents.

The Golf FORE Health Tournament: Supporting Families & Remembering Mike Ahearn

Cooley Dickinson is grateful to the Golf FORE Health Tournament committee members, sponsors, golfers, and volunteers who have raised a net $400,000 to make the Childbirth Center renovations possible.

"When COVID hit and these renovations were jeopardized, the committee knew we wanted to re-double our efforts to support childbirth in our community," says Golf FORE Health Co-Chair Pat Brough.

Adds Co-Chair Natalie Didonna, "The Childbirth Center is personal for us. I was born at Cooley and a lot of committee members had their kids here. We want everyone in our community to have the best birth experience possible."

The 2021 Golf FORE Health Tournament was honored to receive donations in memory of beloved committee member Mike Ahearn. His presence is greatly missed in our community and on the course.

"Mike really enjoyed being a part of the committee over the years and certainly loved playing in the tournament. I have many photos to prove it!" remembers his wife, Bridget Goggins. "I know he would be happy that friends and loved ones supported a tournament very close to his heart."

Anne E. DeFilippo: Supporting Generations of Cooley Babies

If you welcomed your Cooley Baby into the world during the 60s – 80s and a warm, caring woman took a photo of your newborn, there is a high probability that was Anne E. DeFilippo.

Mrs. DeFilippo dedicated her life to her family and to babies in our community. For 25 years, she served as a Ward Secretary in our Childbirth Center. She did a bit of everything for the department, supporting the great group of nurses she worked alongside. Mrs. DeFilippo also extended her service to Cooley outside of work hours, dancing in the Follies fundraiser and volunteering after her retirement.

"My mother loved all babies and children, and she loved working at Cooley Dickinson," says daughter MaryLou DeFilippo. "She would be so happy to know that she was making renovations at the Childbirth Center possible."

"Mom had such a love of children. She was there when every one of my sisters gave birth. And she was always helping new mothers, even when she had six young children of her own at home. I think she would be smiling down to know that these donations will make a big difference for babies at Cooley." Thank you to the many loved ones who donated to continue Anne E. DeFilippo's legacy of caring for children.

When Mrs. DeFilippo passed away in January 2021, her family, including her husband of 71 years, Eugene DeFilippo, her six children, 11 grandchildren, and 11 great grandchildren, decided to direct donations in her memory to the Childbirth Center.

Thomson Financial Management: Serving Our Community

"When we were presented with the opportunity to support the Childbirth Center, I knew it felt right on a personal and professional level," says Renae Ransdell, CFP®, Senior Vice President, Wealth Advisor, Thomson Financial Management.

"We are a service-based organization. One of our core values is extending service in support of our community," explains Ransdell. "And the Thomson Team has a combined 8 children among us – some of whom are Cooley Babies. So, we also have a personal connection in the Childbirth Center's continued success."

Ransdell continues, "I had two very different delivery experiences and am immensely grateful for the care and support my children, myself, and even my spouse received on both occasions.

We hope our donation can contribute to the families of our community having experiences like the ones we are so grateful for."

Thomson Financial Management's generous $30,000 gift to the Childbirth Center brought the fundraising for this project over the $2 million milestone.

Cooley Dickinson Hospital so appreciates the Thomson Team's support for moms and babies in our community.

Florence B

Florence Bank: Proud Supporter of the Childbirth Center

Through the years, Florence Bank has been one of Cooley Dickinson's most loyal supporters, funding everything from the Cancer Center, the Kittredge Surgery Center, a major opioid initiative, and multiple needs related to COVID. Most recently, Florence Bank pledged $100,000 to support the renovation of the Childbirth Center.

For Monica Curhan, Senior Vice President and Marketing Director at Florence Bank, supporting Cooley just makes sense. "Cooley is our local community hospital. Florence is the local community bank. We serve the same community and we both care about the well-being of those living in the community."

Supporting the Childbirth Center is a happy philanthropic choice.

"A lot of Florence Bank employees—both past and present—were either born at Cooley or had their children born at Cooley," notes Curhan.

"We're delighted to be able to support the Center's renovation. For so many of us at Florence and for so many of our customers, Cooley Dickinson is the resource we turn to, and we want to ensure that Cooley delivers the very best birthing experience it can."

◀ Pictured here are just a few of the Florence Bank employees who call themselves Cooley Babies or who have given birth at Cooley Dickinson

TRANSFORMING EMERGENCY CARE: CAMPAIGN FOR THE COOLEY DICKINSON HOSPITAL EMERGENCY DEPARTMENT

Million Dollar Community Challenge

Cooley Dickinson is grateful that four local couples and a local business are collaborating to create the Million Dollar Community Challenge to support the expansion and renovation of the Emergency Department.

They will give one million dollars to support this important campaign if our community collectively gives one million dollars before March 1, 2022. Find out what inspired your neighbors to create this challenge.

John and Elizabeth Armstrong

Since moving to Amherst following John's retirement from a 30-year career at IBM, John and Elizabeth Armstrong have been anything but retiring. UMass Amherst, the Emily Dickinson Museum, and Learning in Retirement are among the many organizations benefitting from their time, treasure, and talent. John, who has been admitted to the Emergency Department on at least three occasions, says, "I have first-hand experience both with the excellent service and a realization that the ED can be overcrowded." Elizabeth notes, "We live in a retirement community with 115 other elderly people, many of whom need Emergency Department services. For their sakes, as well as for our own possible future needs, we're glad to have a role in making the Emergency Department as efficient and up-to-date as possible."

ASMG All States Materials Group®

All States Materials Group (ASMG), a road materials supplier and paving contractor headquartered in Sunderland, has long been a supporter of Cooley Dickinson. ASMG is stepping up to the plate again by participating in the Emergency Department challenge. ASMG, which has over 350 local employees who depend on Cooley Dickinson and its Emergency Department, recognizes that the more the facility is improved, the better it is for everyone. They also value the importance of Cooley Dickinson's affiliation with Mass General Brigham.

An Anonymous Couple

This Northampton couple, who have chosen to participate anonymously, understand that preparing for emergencies requires tremendous investment. As longstanding supporters of multiple local endeavors, they recognize the transformative role philanthropy plays for so many organizations. They are particularly pleased about plans to expand the Behavioral Health Pod, ensuring greater privacy for all.

Jack Horner and Ron Skinn

Jack Horner—a fundraising consultant, philanthropist, and longtime Northampton resident—believes in supporting local institutions. Much of Jack’s work has focused on underserved populations and healthcare. “Being part of this Challenge makes sense, because the ED is important to all of us, including those with fewer means,” says Jack. “My husband Ron Skinn and I loved the idea of collaborating with other community members for a common good.” It’s also important to them as gay men to support not just LGBTQIA+ organizations, but those like Cooley Dickinson that serve the community at large. They hope others who identify as LGBTQIA+ will join them in this Challenge.

Michael Cohen and Chia Collins

When husband and wife Michael Cohen and Chia Collins founded LightLife Foods in 1979, the importance of giving back was already part of their philosophy. “Even before we started making a profit, we knew that when we did, we’d give a percentage of that profit back to the community,” says Michael. Chia adds, “When LightLife was acquired and we did so well financially, we felt enormously blessed and knew we needed to share that blessing.” Michael and Chia both feel an obligation to help create more balance and equality in the world. They appreciate how the Emergency Department is important for everyone in the community, regardless of class, race, or gender. “Our children and grandchildren live here,” Michael says. “We want a strong hospital and ED for them, for ourselves, for everyone we know and don’t know.”

R.F. Conway, MD: A Commitment to Caring for Our Community

“ I’m still involved,
I’m still excited,
and I think our community will be,
too, once they learn about the Emergency
Department project.
We’re eager to improve care for them and their families. ”

—DR. CONWAY

When asked to support Cooley Dickinson Hospital’s Emergency Department campaign, Dr. Ray Conway didn’t hesitate for a moment.

“I’ve watched the Emergency Department grow over the past 40 years,” says Dr. Conway.

“We’ve had several renovations and each time we accomplished pieces of our goals. But this time, we can have a complete renovation that will make Cooley Dickinson the ideal place for emergency medicine.”

Dr. Conway has been here for Cooley’s Emergency Department since 1980 and served as the Medical Director from 1982 until 2016. He became its founding Chief of Emergency Medicine in 1984, when the Medical Staff bylaws created the department of Emergency Medicine, and served until 2015. Dr. Conway remained involved as a donor, volunteer, physician, and now Cooley Dickinson’s Director of Urgent Care. Joining the Campaign Cabinet for the Emergency Department continues his long tradition of support.

“I support many nonprofits, but Cooley Dickinson is the recipient of the majority of my support because it has the greatest impact on our community,” explains Dr. Conway. “I began donating to the hospital in 1980 and have given yearly ever since.”

Molly Keegan: Galvanizing Support for the Emergency Department Campaign

For Molly Keegan, co-owner of Curran and Keegan Financial, a local financial planning and investment firm, making a personal gift to the Emergency Department campaign was an easy decision. "The ED is one area of the hospital that really touches everyone in the community. Through the years, my family, which includes my husband and six children between us, has interacted with the ED many, many times, always with a good outcome."

More recently, Keegan's husband, Robert Laprade, had an ED experience which left a profound impression. "My husband was having alarming symptoms, which turned out to be a TIA (a stroke-like attack). So, we got to the ED as quickly as possible. When we were told, 'a doctor will be in with you shortly,' we fully expected someone to walk in. Instead, a video screen came on, putting us face to face with a neurologist at Mass General. It was such an incredible comfort to us to know that we were getting the very best world class care right there, in the moment. And Bob's outcome was excellent, so we couldn't be any more grateful."

For Keegan, the ED is so important she has chosen to serve on the ED Campaign Cabinet. "I hope everyone in the community chooses to support the ED. And it's not just important for those seeking care. Given the pandemic, it's also especially important that we support our frontline healthcare workers. Nobody is more frontline than the ED nurses and doctors and the first responders. They deserve to work in the best working conditions our community can provide."

Dr. Alvah Hinckley: Colleagues Honor His Service and the Hospital He Loves

Recently, a group of Cooley Dickinson’s Surgical staff led by Dr. Holly Michaelson, Dr. Michelle Helms, and Lynn Kimel RN, raised funds to honor the retirement of their longtime surgical colleague, Dr. Alvah Hinckley. “When we reached out to the Cooley community, the outpouring of support was incredible,” notes Dr. Michaelson. “We’re thrilled to name Operating Room #4, where Alvah performed surgeries, in his honor.”

Beginning in 1982, Dr. Hinckley distinguished himself for his quietly passionate dedication to Cooley Dickinson and our community.

Notes, Lynn Kimel, a surgical nurse who worked alongside Dr. Hinckley for decades, “He always made time to ask how you and your family are doing. He has a particular quality of listening—to patients and to us, his colleagues.”

In addition to caring for countless patients, Dr. Hinckley served on numerous committees and in leadership positions: The Medical Executive Committee, Patient Care Assessment Committee, and as Chief of Surgery, to name a few.

Thank you, Alvah!

Professor Stanley Rabinowitz: Decades of Generosity and Gratitude

Stanley Rabinowitz, the Henry Steele Commager Professor of Russian Emeritus at Amherst College, started donating to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in the 1980s. "I began supporting the hospital because it seemed the right thing to do in a small community," explains Rabinowitz.

"I wasn't a patient myself until 2015 when I underwent emergency removal of kidney stones," Rabinowitz recalls. "My experience as a patient, and my experiences accompanying my mother to her daily 6-week long radiation treatments before that, changed my attitude in very concrete and positive ways towards medicine, towards doctors and supporting staff, towards hospitals, and towards this hospital.

"Both my mother and I were given the attention and seriousness required, and we were treated with an almost loving, humane touch. I will never forget the urologist telling me how he loves Chekhov as he wheeled me in for surgery or the anesthesiologist joking with me about looking forward to his son's baseball game, which greatly calmed my fears," says Rabinowitz.

"They did everything they could to make me feel comfortable. In those moments, they might as well have been my relatives. They made the fear melt away.

"These experiences absolutely transformed my reasons for donating," says Rabinowitz. "A local hospital is important for improving quality of life in a community. And that is no longer an abstract concept for me."

"When you live in a small community, giving to your hospital helps you feel closer, it gives you a sense of togetherness. If we give, we give to support our friends, to support our neighbors, to support the person walking by us on the street."

Cooley Dickinson Hospital thanks Professor Rabinowitz for his steadfast support of our community.

Priscilla Pike: Her Generosity Lives On 3/4/1932 – 11/8/2021

Planning for this report began last spring, at which time we connected with our cherished friend Priscilla Pike, who agreed to be profiled. In November, after her article was written and approved, she died suddenly, leaving the hospital a significant gift via her estate, as well as allowing us to realize the remainder of a charitable gift annuity that she had established. Below you can read Priscilla's words on why giving to Cooley Dickinson was so important to her.

For decades, up until her sudden death at the age of 89, Priscilla Pike was a steady and staunch supporter of Cooley Dickinson.

Priscilla, a retired educator who taught at the Clarke School for 41 years said, "I've always been so very grateful to have a good hospital nearby. When I worked at the Clarke School, if a child got sick, we could always depend on Cooley Dickinson. And the hospital has been there for dear friends, my mother, acquaintances, and myself when I've needed it."

In 2006, Priscilla worked with the Cooley Dickinson Development Office and set up a charitable gift annuity, which provided a steady source of income for her lifetime while also benefiting the hospital. With Priscilla's death, the remainder of her annuity will come back to Cooley. Additionally, she left Cooley Dickinson as the beneficiary of her life insurance and retirement plans, allowing her generosity to keep supporting the hospital's work.

Priscilla was frank about her motivation for giving. "I have no family. Yet there are some things I need to do before I die that could be of use for people." For Priscilla, that meant supporting Cooley Dickinson. "Nobody wants or plans to go there, but we don't have that choice. Supporting it helps me know mentally that I'm doing something useful."

Thank you, Priscilla. We pledge to put your legacy gifts to use as you desired. We will miss you.

Gary Mongeon: Acting Now for Cooley Dickinson's Future

In November 2020, Gary Mongeon celebrated 50 years of service at Cooley Dickinson. During his long tenure in Cooley's main laboratory, Gary worked as a microbiology technician and as the lab's Information Systems Manager. For 17 years, he was the hospital's Head of Microbiology, Serology, and Urinalysis.

Gary has chosen to honor Cooley Dickinson by setting up an estate plan that specifically supports the hospital's laboratory. His reasons are both personal and pragmatic. "I wanted to make sure that once I was gone, everything that I worked for over the years would be in a good place financially."

"It's also very important to contribute to the hospital because it benefits the whole community. I don't think most people realize how vulnerable hospitals are financially. Things shifted drastically in the eighties, due to changes in state and federal reimbursement. I think it's important for people to understand that there's no guaranteed money flow that comes to hospitals."

Cooley Dickinson is grateful to individuals like Gary, who understand the financial challenges today's hospitals face. Through his generous annual gifts, Gary regularly supports our ability to meet our patient's current needs. By including the hospital in his trust, he is ensuring our ability to care for patients' future medical needs as well.

Fred and Eva Fierst: A Gift of Gratitude for their Son

Frederick Fierst, Senior Partner at Fierst Bloomberg Ohm LLP in Northampton, has traveled and worked all over the world. His adventures include backpacking in Europe, Israel, and North Africa; a successful career in corporate and entertainment law in New York City; and meeting his wife, Eva, while exploring Machu Picchu. For all these worldly adventures, Fred and Eva are deeply grateful to call Northampton home. Part of their gratitude is because of Cooley Dickinson.

In November 2020, Fred's eldest son Benjamin woke up in the middle of the night and couldn't breathe. Says Fred, "It was bad. He thought he was going to die." Benjamin drove himself to the Emergency Department, a mere 7-minutes from his home in Florence, and was subsequently admitted into Cooley's ICU.

"It was nip and tuck for over a week," says Fred. "Ben had a high fever, he needed oxygen."

Because this took place during the pandemic, the Fiersts were unable to visit. "It was gut-wrenching. But someone from the ICU called us every single day letting us know how Ben was doing. Everyone was so kind and professional. Ben received exceptional care. And he made it."

"Cooley Dickinson is an area treasure," says Fred, "and it's right in our backyard. All our children—Benjamin, Daniel, and Sonya—were born there. Benjamin owes his life to Cooley. For us, making a donation to the hospital feels as natural as breathing."
